Our training programs are designed for the fire service as well as private industry and corporate safety personnel.

There are many hidden assumptions between fire department personnel and property management representatives during a fire and other emergency situations.

The risk of being unprepared can be devastating.

High-Rise buildings need to have properly trained management personnel in charge of procedures and specific responsibilities before the fire department arrives.

Management must be properly trained to assist the fire department with Information about the buildings' fire and life safety systems and have firm accountability of all occupants.

flexible solutions for your training needs

High-Rise Training Programs

Most Fire and Building Codes defines a High-Rise as a building with occupied floors 75 feet or higher above Fire Department access. High-rises present a specific challenge for emergency planning due to their size.

As an owner, tenant or property manager of a High-Rise you are responsible for making sure all visitors, employees and tenants of the building understand fire safety and fire drill requirements.

We offer many valuable resources for preparing for a high rise fire emergency.
